THE VICTIMS OF REBEL BARBARITY.—In the Crutch, a journal published at the Annapolis Hospital, we find the following affecting narrative that needs no comment:

The largest funeral known in this hospital in this country, and the saddest spectacle ever presented, was witnessed here lately by a large concourse of people, drawn together from sincere respect for the noble dead, who, after meeting all the exigences of a terrible war, had bravely set their faces homeward, to live, it might be, or to die, if they must, on their own native soil.

At ten in the morning the ambulances, thirteen in number, containing forty-three dead bodies of paroled men, many of whom died on the passage hither, were drawn up in line before the chapel, attended by guards, and preceded by the hospital band, with muffled drums playing the solemn dirge. The funeral services were performed in the open air, the chapel steps being occupied by the officers of the post, a Committee from the Sanitary Commission, and the chapel choir. After the beautiful dirge, "Hark! to the solemn Bell," had been sung, the silent assemblage was addressed in the most solemn and impressive manner by Love, of Wisconsin, who paid a just and lofty tribute to the memory of the dead, many of whom while living, bore grateful testimony of his ministering brotherly kindness.

It was a scene never to be forgotten—the awestruck crowd, standing with uncovered heads bowed, and tearful eyes, between the long line of dead and their kindred, scattered, alien—deaf to the invocation sent on high by stranger lips in their behalf. We trust the scene may never be repeated, while we take consolation in the thought that these wronged and lamented heroes died in ministering hands, and were cherished as a peculiar people by those who received them, and have spared no means of soothing their last hours. After a touching prayer had been offered by the chaplain, followed by a benediction, the band struck up a dirge, and the sad procession moved on toward the cemetery, where other appropriate services closed the chapter in the sad history of hospital life, long to be remembered.

SUE MUNDY.—We take the following from the Louisville Journal:

We have it from good authority that Sue Mundy is not a female as generally believed, but is in reality Jerome Clark, a son of Hector M. Clark, of Simpson county, Ky., and cousin to Hon. Beverly L. Clark; also cousin to Tandy Clark, now in the State prison for robbing the mails. He is about 22 years of age, of medium female stature, small feet and hands, face beardless and quite handsome, voice soft and feminine—all together making a counterfeit so perfect that even John Morgan, on a certain occasion, mistook him for a female. He belonged to Morgan's command, and was with him on his raid through Ohio. His first experiment at deception in female attire, was played off upon his commanding General. He was neatly dressed in Bloomer costume, wore a fancy military cap, containing a wig of female hair, which in long tresses flowed down carelessly over her shoulders. Thus attired, he was introduced to his chieftain by some of his comrades in arms as Miss Sue Mundy, who, under the irresistible promptings of patriotism, was earnestly solicitous to obtain a position in his command favorable to the development of her highly intensified sympathies and prowess in behalf of the rebellion. Morgan struck with the beauty and heroic bearing of Miss Mundy, at once consented to enroll her, and give her a desirable position. But, on inquiring particularly in reference to her name, she replied, "Jerome Clark, Sir." When the merriment resulting from his successful experiment had subsided, Morgan remarked, "All right, boys, we will have use for Sue Mundy." It followed that Clark in the character of Sue Mundy, rendered invaluable service to John Morgan.

REBEL BARBARITIES.—G. H. Ferrell writes to his brother in Solano county, Cal., of his experience in a rebel prison:

Hundreds of poor fellows, without pants or even a rag to hide their nakedness, lay strewn around among the dead and dying; and the place was so thickly crowded that it was almost impossible to walk through the camp. Men starved to death by the hundred daily. You may think I am exaggerating; but, as true as there is a God, I have seen hundreds of them that I knew did starve to death! I was at one time reduced until I weighed only one hundred and ten pounds. [His weight, previous to enlisting, was about one hundred and seventy pounds.] Thank God, I am again in a land of plenty.

NEW SUIT.—We learn that Sue Mundy and her (or his) guerrillas have adopted a new uniform recently. Sue wears a red flannel suit with a red cap, adorned with a long black feather fastened to its front, with a $100 greenback bill pinned on with a magnificent diamond pin. The men are also dressed in red flannel, with a black stripe two inches wide down their pants, but their caps are adorned with feathers. All of them are "flush" with greenbacks, diamond pins and rings, and seem to "take things easy" in this world. Billy Magruder's men are about to adopt a similar style of dress.—Louisville Democrat.

More about the State Debt.

Since our adversaries are making a great bugbear of the fact that the State is somewhat in debt, and by operation of the bounty laws lately passed is very likely to become still more so, we cannot use a little space better than to show how great the real amount incurred under the bounty system of the State is likely to be. The opposition press modestly place the sum at a half million of dollars, which is really more than double the whole amount assumed to be paid by the State to volunteers, including increase of pay to the discharged cavalry, as well as bounties for present and future enlistments.

In conversation with the Secretary of State we have gathered facts that enable us to approximate somewhere near to the number of discharged cavalrymen, and newly enlisted men. It seems that there will be about 405 whose discharges after three years' service entitle them to five dollars extra pay per month, which would make about the sum of seventy-five thousand dollars, coming to them from the State. For this sum the bonds are now issued or being issued, while the bonds to the present volunteers for future service in infantry and cavalry are divided into three yearly installments, a bond for fifty dollars being issued at each time, making one hundred and fifty dollars in all to each soldier who has the benefit of the law. Of the last volunteers there are less than eight hundred, and not much prospect of more being raised soon. If the statements made that Gen. McDowell was unauthorized to make the call, be true, which we doubt, there is no danger that the War Department will insist upon the recruiting for more troops here. It then appears that eight hundred men have enlisted expecting a bounty of one hundred and fifty dollars each, whose bounties combined amount to the sum of one hundred and twenty thousand dollars.

So, from indications now apparent, two hundred thousand dollars will be about the amount of the State's prospective liability. Still there may be a few more enlistments, and to place the matter at as high a figure as it will ever reach, we will name two hundred and fifty thousand dollars as the sum total of the debt of Oregon, to be incurred in providing bounties and extra pay for the volunteers raised at home. Beyond that sum it will not go, and it is not likely to fully reach that. The people can decide for themselves if they are able to pay that sum, and we think they should know that at present it only reaches two hundred thousand dollars, and has no probability of exceeding a quarter of million, instead of our being burdened with half a million of debt as has been so often asserted by the Democratic newspapers.

A Talent for Financial Affairs.—It is wonderful to note how great a talent some, or even all, the members of the "Democratic" party have for financiering. Their party press in this State have at last found a weapon with which the brains are to be cudgelled out of their opponents the "Abolitionists." Their readers are constantly pointed to the fact that the indebtedness of the State is greater than it ever was before, and economical "Democrats" are asked to observe that this state of things exists by reason of the wasteful expenditure and reckless prodigality of those who are, and have been, charged with the public business. Now this, unfair as it is, is doubtless as good an argument for their partisan purposes as any they could desire. The greater portion of the present debt, as all know, has arisen from the obligations the State was under to raise troops, and the consequent necessity of offering a bounty for that purpose. In times of war, people cannot but expect that the expenditures of Government will be greater than during periods of repose. However great the unusual demands of the times may make our debt, we may safely rest in the supposition that a long period will elapse before the people will intrust the administration of public affairs to the men through whose misfeasance the country was brought into the extremity of peril that has, for four years, beset it.

The Mountaineer and the Mint.—The Dalles paper publishes a dispatch, claimed to have been received from Newell, saying that the Mint is all right, and that Logan been appointed its Superintendant. In view of the success of his mission, Newell announces that he will soon return. We prefer waiting for more reliable statements before believing that the Mint is to be built at the Dalles. When we learn the particulars of the matter from the east we will give the world the benefit of them. To believe that the Mint was not to be located at Portland, according to the request of the Legislature of Oregon, and the assurances of all our Congressmen, would be equivalent to considering the latter as wanting in all that constitutes honor and good faith, and adepts in the science of perfidy.

Victoria Items.—A panther measuring nine feet in length was killed near Victoria.

James McKinzie, 2d mate of the schooner Dom-itila, was accidentally killed by falling from the fore yard of that vessel.

Chinamen were arriving, having left San Francisco to avoid taxes.

The U. S. Consul at Victoria is to enforce the new passport system.

The Colonist says that the tax proposed to be laid on all stock imported into that colony is a popular measure.

The Delany Murder.—The Grand Jury of Marion county found a true bill against George Beale and George Baker for the murder of Dan'l Delany, Sen. All other business being disposed of, Court has adjourned until this (Monday) morning. Whether the trial will take place depends on the ability to empannel a jury in that county; and the efforts that the counsel for the accused may make to procure a change of venue. There is a probability that such an effort will be made.

Fatal Accident at Yoncalla.—A sad accident occurred at Yoncalla on the 9th inst. Robert Cowan, an old and much respected citizen of Umpqua valley, while engaged in felling timber accidentally came in contact with a falling tree and was killed on the spot. Mr. Cowan was a kind husband, indulgent father, and as a neighbor and citizen he was highly esteemed. He leaves a large family and a wide circle of friends to mourn his untimely end.

General Wool.—The health of Major General John E. Wool, United States Army (retired), is said to be fast failing. This veteran officer is now far advanced in years, and keeps well to his official residence in Troy, New York, spending most of his time in retirement, in the preparation of his memoirs and other writings, the completion of which, anterior to his dissolution, gives him the greatest possible anxiety.

WRECK OF THE INDUSTRY.—Mr. C. B. Heald, one of the passengers on the ill fated Bark Industry, gives us the following particulars of her wreck upon the Middle Sands at the Mouth of the Columbia: On Thursday, March 16th, Captain Lewis, of the Bark, ... the Pilot ... to ... him ... Edwards undertook to cross the bar. ... ship was under ... we are ... and probably the Pilot Boat ... Mr. Heald says the Pilot Boat was ... almost alongside ... He says the Captain ... the wind then ... and the bark ... after ... ...after getting on ... the ... and effort to ... was attended with ... which dropped; but the bark dragged her anchors and struck on the Middle Sands about 2 o'clock Thursday afternoon ... Light House ... and the ... ebb ... cable and ... on the Middle Ground, ... sprung a leak. After the ... and with a hole in ... above ... The ... launched, but was immediately swamped, and the first mate drowned. ... between the boat and ... a few efforts to save ... over an oar. ... farewell to those ... but the ... They now waited for ... would go down ... o'clock took to the rigging. During ... upper works, cabins, &c. ... away and the boats lost; weather was clear and pleasant; did not suffer from cold; no wind, but heavy sea. From ... o'clock A. M. ... smooth, but no boat in sight. They made two rafts ... the spars. The first ... in all, who were drifted over into South Channel and picked up ... boat from ... manned by soldiers, to whom our informant accords every praise for their gallant efforts to rescue the unfortunate men on the wreck. The other raft ... a ... time. Four ... were washed off and lost, a girl aged twelve years, whose father and mother were still on the wreck, and a man who died when the life-boat reached them, two men only being rescued. Ten persons remained upon the wreck, Capt. Lewis, six of the crew, Mr. and Mrs. Marks, from Callao, who had lately lived at Walla Walla, and was returning with his wife and daughter, and a passenger. The life-boat put those saved on a sloop from Astoria. The steamer Wright, Capt. Lewis, came in at 11 o'clock Friday morning without a pilot, and was therefore unable to render assistance. The Wright returned the same evening to the sand with several pilots on board, and Capt. Lewis says there was no possibility of rendering any assistance. There were then three persons in the rigging. The rest were, no doubt, washed off and drowned. The persons saved were John Weer, sailor; James Peterson and an unknown one, both sailors; Silas Wightman and Charles B. Heald, passengers. The persons drowned were Cavinde, 1st Mate; Steward, name unknown; Matilda Marks and two Chinamen, passengers. On the wreck were left Capt. Lewis; Green, 2d Mate and five sailors, names unknown; Mr. and Mrs. Marks, returning to Walla Walla. If there were only three persons on the wreck Friday morning, there must have been fourteen drowned up to that time. Mr. Heald speaks in the very highest terms of the officers and crew of that unfortunate vessel during the trying events of the shipwreck. Captain Lewis, he says, was cool and collected, and there was no excitement or fear manifested by the crew or passengers. All measures for the preservation of the vessel and lives of those on board, were taken without confusion. His statement is, that the bark expected a pilot, which the boat came near them; and he seems to think a pilot could easily have came on board when the vessel first anchored; but Mr. Heald is not a sailor; and says that he does not feel competent to say what should or should not have been done. Those who knew Edwards, who was in charge of the Pilot Boat, will not readily believe that any fault can be attached to one so fearless of danger and prompt in the discharge of duties. The reports from Pilot Edwards, will throw light upon the matter, and show facts connected with the wreck not apparent to a landsman.

LOSS OF THE INDUSTRY.—The description we have given above of the loss of the favorite bark Industry, will be read with a great degree of mingled regret and interest. This vessel has been long in the Oregon packet line, and was always considered one of the best. Capt. Paul Corno, has commanded her for many years, and only a short time since, gave command to his chief officer, Mr. Lewis, who was acting as Master at the time of the disaster. Those who were fortunate enough to escape from the wreck, give Capt. Lewis great credit for his cool manner, and having known him for some time, we feel assured that he did all that mortal could do, for those under his charge, while he had an opportunity. It is another of those unhappy incidents on the Columbia bar that can only be prevented by the use of steam tugs. Capt. Lewis of the Geo. S. Wright, coming in the day following the disaster, did all that was possible to save those still clinging to the wreck; but as will be seen by his statement in the marine report, it was utterly useless to attempt it. Our merchants had a very valuable cargo of merchandise aboard, but we are unable at the present writing to give with any certainty, the losses. The steamer Oregon, coming in at a later hour than when the above was written, brings further intelligence concerning the wreck. Captain Johnson informs us that while crossing the bar at about nine o'clock Saturday evening, he saw the wreck plainly. Looking with his glass, he discovered no person upon the rigging—supposed all had left the wreck, and was surprised when arriving at Astoria, to learn that not long before, persons had been seen in the main and fore tops. The mizzen mast had fallen; the hull of the bark was under water—the masts stood straight up with all sails flowing. In the tops were apparently bundles of something that he supposed to be canvas stowed there, as is sometimes the case, but which might possibly have been the survivors of the wreck huddled together for warmth. He heard at Astoria that there were canned oysters in the tops, on which they could subsist for several days, and water could be easily caught. The masts were standing Sunday morning, and pilot Cole was going to the wreck with the pilot boat and ... the survivors. Capt. Johnson thinks a good boat well manned could reach the vessel, as she lies at favoring tide and calm weather.

ST. PATRICK'S DAY.—On Friday, our regular reporter was unable to attend to the business of his office, in consequence of sickness in his family, and entrusted the matter to a "substitute." An error crept into the notice of the proceedings of that day, concerning the celebration, of which we proposed to make a correction and give in connection a list of the "toasts," in reference to the oration of Mr. McCormick, etc., from the records of the occasion, and MSS. of the oration. These latter we are unable to obtain. The anniversary, however, we will state, was not of the funeral of St. Patrick, but at the date of his being canonized by the church. The error is one of ... with the "types." From the patriotic tone of the speeches and "toasts," we are informed, and more especially the remarks of Mr. McCormick, we regret that we could not obtain the data for a proper mention of them.

A GOOD STREET.—Coming through Oregon City the other day, we noticed what we have noticed before, and several times referred to. The main street there is properly macadamized and handsomely graded. The work is done substantially and well, and after several years hard service, is good as new. What is well done is twice done. The grade being good, the street of Oregon City is drained of all surplus water, and the work being well done, they have no ... repairs ... keep it in order. It ... Oregon City and ... a follow ...

Cure Your Cold, Save Your Lungs.
NEWELL'S
PULMONARY SYRUP HAS CURED THOUSANDS!
And it will Cure You!
"A Cough is generally the effect of a Cold, which has either been improperly treated or entirely neglected. When it proves obstinate there is Always reason to fear the consequences, as this shows a weak state of the lungs, and is often the forerunner of Consumption.—[Buchanan's Domestic Medicine.

STOP THAN COUGHING!
Some of you can't, and we pity you. You have tried every remedy but the one destined, by its intrinsic merit, to supercede all similar preparations. It is not surprising you should be reluctant to try something else after the many experiments you have made of trashy compounds foisted on the public as a certain cure; but

Pulmonary Syrup!
Is really the VERY BEST remedy ever compounded for the cure of Coughs, Colds, Sore Throat, Asthma, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis and Consumption. Thousands of people in California and Oregon have been already benefited by its surprising curative powers.

WHAT KILLED HIM!
Dr. Hall, in his "Journal of Health," speaking of the death of Washington Irving, asks the above question, and adds; "He might have remained with us for some years to come, had it not been for advice, kindly intended, no doubt, but given in thoughtlessness and reckless ignorance.
He Had a Cold!
Which by some injudicious prescription, had been converted into asthma." Let me say to Dr. Hall that that "prescription" was not
NEWELL'S PULMONARY SYRUP.
KEEP IT IN THE HOUSE, use it freely, give it to your children upon the slightest indications of a Cold, and you will think and speak of it as all do who have become acquainted with its merits.

Truth Stranger than Fiction.—The Doylestown Democrat prints the annexed "historic strange," and vouches for its truth.

A few years ago there was living in a northern county in Pennsylvania a poor family. The mother was fond of reading. One day a peddler came along with books to sell, which she wanted but was unable to buy, for she had no money. He asked her if she had nothing to give in exchange for them, and she said nothing but children. He said he would take one of them, and a bargain was struck for a fine looking little boy. The peddler dressed him up nicely and took him off. Years rolled round and the child was not heard from. He had become as one dead. Within a very few months a gentleman living at the county seat of this same county one night dreamed a dream. He dreamed that somebody had died and left a legacy of six or seven thousand dollars to the brother of the little boy given away for the books, and who was now doing business in the same town. In the morning he told the brother of his dream, who laughed and said that he knew no one who would leave him that amount of money. A few days afterward the brother received notice by mail that he had been left a legacy of seven thousand dollars, and it was by the little boy who had been taken away by the peddler. He had settled in the West and done well, and had died, or been killed in the army, after making a will in favor of his brother. Let those who study the "philosophy of dreaming" turn this matter over in their brain.

Japanese View of the English.—The following extract from the work published as to the recent visit to England of the Japanese Ambassadors will be interesting to our readers. The English are thus spoken of: "They, the western barbarians, who have lately destroyed our town, we visited. The men are red-faced and fond of eating, and the low men eat raw meat, of which lumps are exhibited, much to our disgust. These people are very expert in iron; copies of their works our artists have drawn. Their buyers and sellers (merchants) are not allowed to do any other work, and, therefore, being somewhat ignorant, principally talk of business. The nobles (Daimois) buy their wives from the merchants, who train their daughters for that purpose. We think them great barbarians! The women wear frames to keep away the men. Some are pretty, but their eyes are large and close together; their feet are large and clumsy, and they have big legs. These women sing loud and roll their eyes, keeping time with the motions of their heads. When they meet the men in the evening, they are partially dressed. These people make us sick eating and drinking. The carriages in the streets try to knock down the people on foot, especially the women, to amuse the drivers. Their government house, where the Daimios meet to talk and sleep, is well built, and equal to a first-class tea-house; the women are kept there in a cage. These people looked at us much. The women are allowed to run about without keepers, playing with umbrellas (parasols). They are the greatest barbarians in the west."

The Fate of Bizzaro.—The vigorous measures of the Italian General had led to the death or surrender of the companions of Bizzaro, except a woman who bore a young child in her arms. Persecuted by militia, he had taken refuge in a cave which he supposed to be known only to himself. The woman and child were with him. It was near the end of the year. The mountains were covered with snow, and the valley ran torrents of rain. The chill, whom the discomforts of this life and the want of nourishment had rendered feeble and irritable, kept up an almost incessant cry. Bizzaro said to his mistress: "Woman, this child of yours seems determined to betray me to my enemies." She responded with tears and vain efforts to hush the cries of her babe. Bizzaro rose, took the child by its legs and dashed out its brains against the rocky side of the cavern. The mother was a Calabrian, and masked her grief while she meditated revenge. The next night while Bizzaro slept, she blew out his brains. Nor is this all. She severed his head from his body, wrapped it in a piece of clothing, and carried it some miles to a military station, where she asked an interview with the commandant. "I am told that you offer a reward of a thousand ducats for the head of the brigand Bizzaro." "It is true." "Here is his head, give me the money." The identity was proved, and the money paid to her. She counted it over with the impassibility of a peasant woman receiving her pay for a basket of eggs.

In the Ortum of 18—, my friend, the editor of the Baldinsville Bugle, was obliged to leav perfeshernal dooties and go and dig his taters, and he axed me to edit for him durin' his absence. Accordingly I ground up his shears and commenced. It didn't take me a great while to slash out copy enuff from the exchanges for one isssoo, and I thawt I'd ride up to the next town on a lit tle Jaunt, to rest my Braines, which had been severely rackt by my mental efforts. (This is sorter Ironical.) So I went over to the Rale Road office and axed the super-intendent fur a pars. "You a editor?" he axed, evijently on the point of snickerin'. "Yes, Sir," sez I, "don't I look poor enuff?" "Just about," said he, "but our road can't pars you." "Can't, hey?" "No, Sir—it can't." "Becaux," sez I, looking him full in the face with a eagle eye, "it goes so darnd slow it can't pars anybody." Methinks I had him thar. It's the slowest Rail Road in the West. With a mortified air he told me to git out of the offiss. I pitied him and went.—Artemus Ward.

An Intricate Consanguinity.—According to a French newspaper, a rich farmer, rather advanced in years, residing in the neighborhood of the city of Lille, and reduced to widowhood, fell in love with a young girl, eighteen years of age, and married her. After the lapse of six months, his son by his first wife became also enamored of the young and handsome widow, mother of his father's young bride, then thirty-six years old, and married her. Consequently, we have a father son in law of his own son, and a wife becoming not only daughter-in-law of the son of her husband, but mother-in-law of her mother, who in turn, becomes daughter-in-law of her daughter, while her husband is father-in-law of his mother-in-law, and father in-law of his father.

When General Thomas was a cadet at West Point he was called "Old Tom," on account of his sedateness. He was a methodical boy, and as a man is so strong-minded that in the army he is known as "Obstinate Tom."
